

The Narcissus' Guide

First selfie with a selfie stick.

Why this guilt, you would ask. Guilt because the selfie stick is nothing but a dildo for its own image, a selfie extension, pushing further more the narcissic pleasure of seeing ourselves in the screen.

Nevertheless I'm not here to blame narcissism, this is not the subject. In this society of deep loneliness, we are our only friend and seeing ourselves alive in the screen is a good way to exist (among so many others).

You will see in this book –name it whatever you want to name it, a fanzine, a pamphlet, a brochure, a scrap of paper, a magazine or a tissue– a collection of selfies shot with a selfie stick.

Some of them are missed, uncontrolled, unpredictable, off-centered whereas some of them are extremely conscious and deliberate.

I hope you will enjoy it as much as I enjoy taking selfies.

With Photoshop.

SITUATIONS

In a trunk.

At the restaurant.

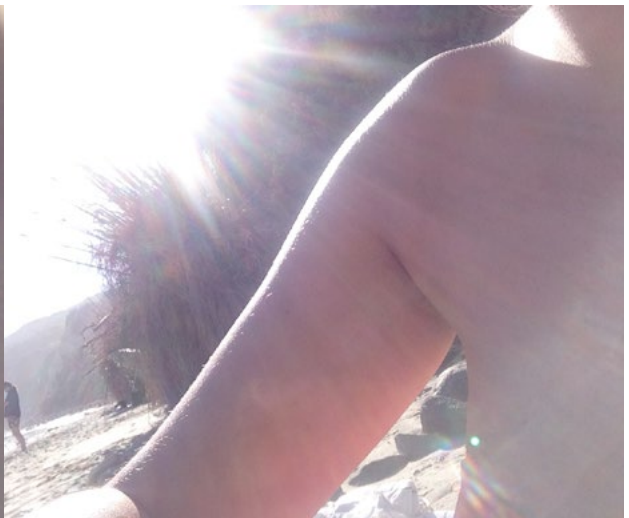

FAILED

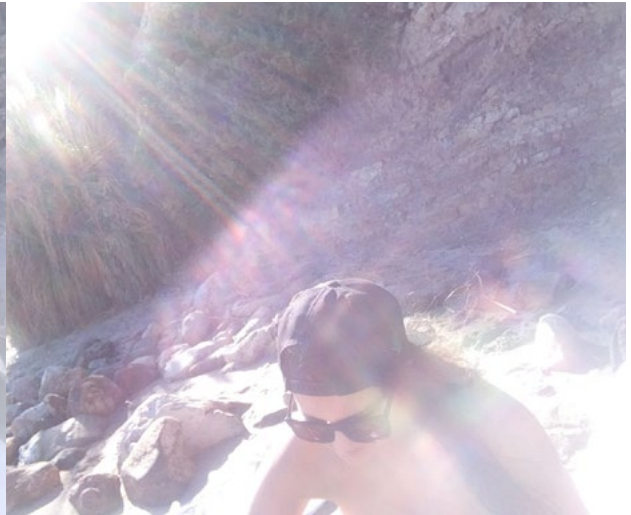

No.

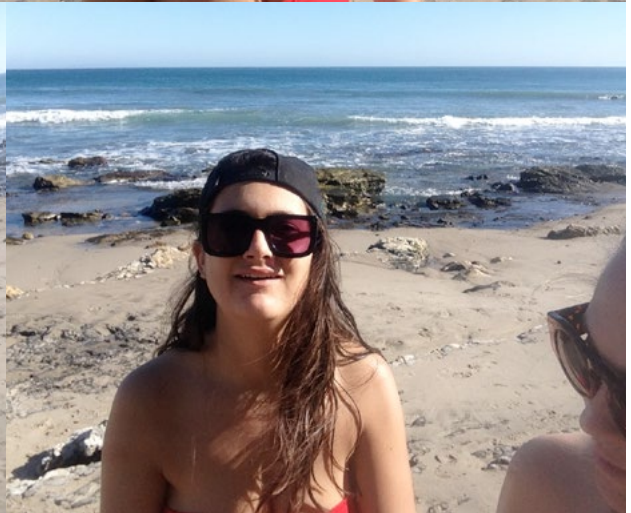

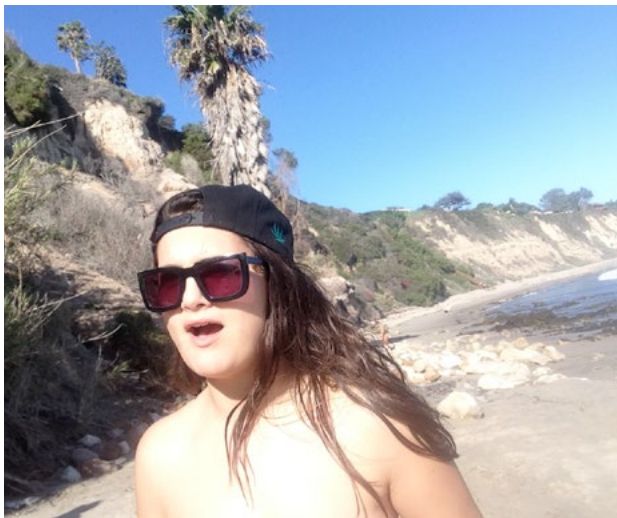

Almost there.

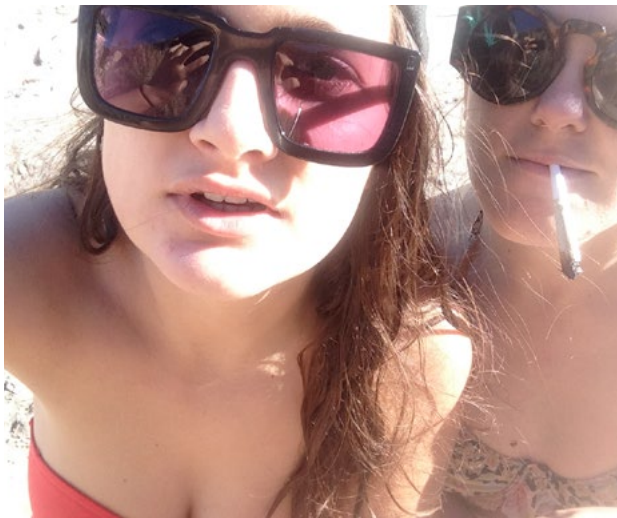

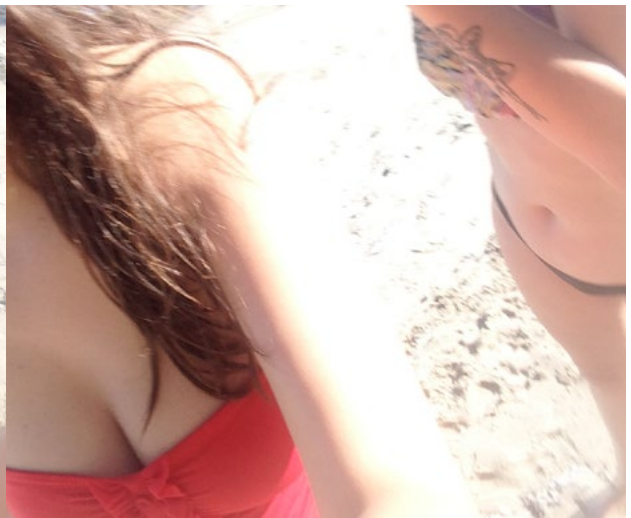

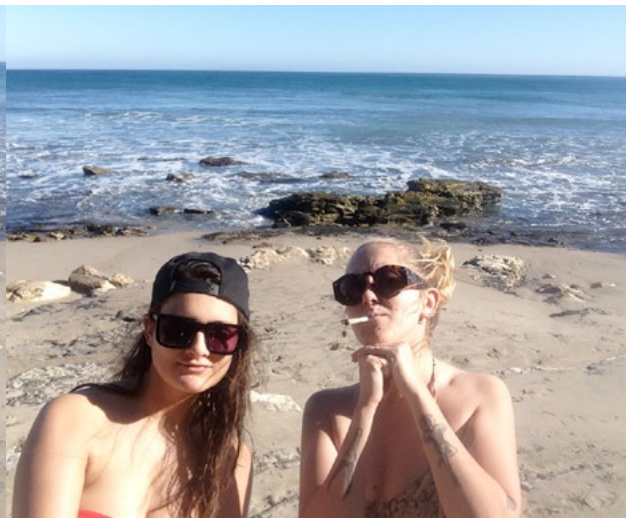

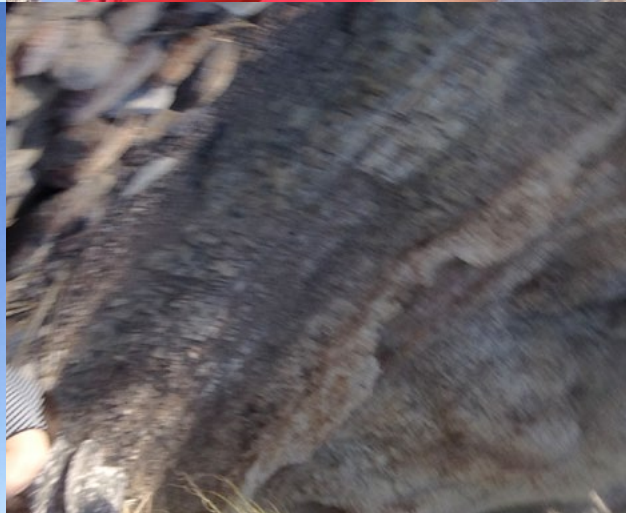

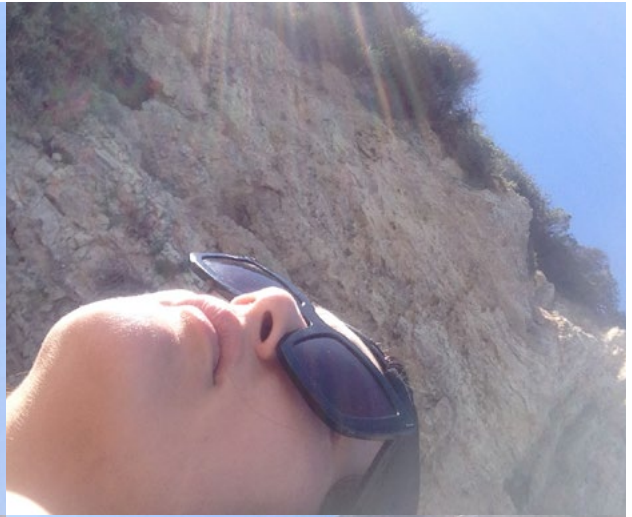

Those selfies were taken at Point Dume, Malibu.

My friend Elena had bought a selfie stick, which made us very enthusiastic. I made a mistake while adjusting my phone on the stick. The stick's clamp kept pushing on the trigger, that's why I have all those useless shoots. A simple selfie with Allison and the sea on the background was the initial idea .
